VANCOUVER (CP) — A wildcat walkout of workers at a Fort Nelson natural gas processing plant continued today, threatening a halt to all gas exports to the United States and a cutback to B.C.

Another plant at Taylor is now all that remains in the way of a complete freeze in but a union spokesman there said he does not expect the walkouts to reach his plant.

Hours

Workers at MacMillan-Bloedel's Harmac pulp mill in Nanaimo have agreed to shorten their working hours to avoid possible lay-offs caused by the slumping lumber market.

Union and management representatives are now working out of the details of switching the company's 1,100-man-labor force from a 40 hour week to a 32-hour week, a Harmac spokesman said Friday.

About 160 men were to have been laid off because of the bad market conditions but the spokesman said both union and management have "ac-cepted the concept" of the 32 hour week for most workers, members of Local 8 of the Pulp, Paper and Wood-workers of Canada. Bank Rate

Gas Plan Pleases Few

OTTAWA — Federal fi-nance officials reacted skeptically Friday to Premier Barrett's proposal to double the export price of B.C. natu-ral gas and share the revenue increase three ways among Ottawa, the province and B.C. municipalities.

"We are studying it," said one official. "We are sort of gently pessimistic about it. It doesn't look very encourag-

But reaction from the U.S. was stronger.

"Holy smoke, they're getting five times what they got a year ago already," Francis Pearson of the Washington State Utilities and Transportation Commission exclaimed in Scattle. in Seattle.

Calling Barrett a "blue-eyed Arab", Pearson said Northwest Washington cus-tomers have been receiving 400 million cubic feet a day, rather than the contracted-for 806 million cubic feet.

"I don't see how they can be competitive when they are blackmailed all the time."

The new revenue-sharing proposal outlined by Barrett was presented by the B.C. government as an alternative to a contentious provision in the new federal budget.

The B.C. premier said the scheme he has proposed would give Ottawa an additional $60 million a year from gas sales, or three or four times more than would flow into the federal treasury under the budget proposal.

In effect, Barrett urged Ottawa to enter into an ad hoc agreement bypassing the con-troversial "fair market value" provision of the bud-get. He did not call directly

"Dief ... he doesn't drink, e doesn't smoke or run around very much.'

McKinnon said a 50 per cent raise in pay isn't so much ex-orbitant as perhaps infla-tionary. And his counterpart in Esquimalt-Saanich said even with such a raise he'd be richer if he'd stayed in the diplomatic service.

McKinnon's comments and those of his Tory colleague Donald Munro were delivered in the 600-seat Oak Bay junior secondary auditorium.

CIA Welcome to Whole Ruddy Lot' in U.K. Transport

By IAN MACDONALD

Times London Bureau

LONDON - Peales of hysterical laughter rang through the swaying carriages of London's subway trains as commuters read of a plan by the mighty CIA to steal the secrets of the city's underground transport system.

"Blimey, mate, they're welcome to cart the whole ruddy lot off to America," said one bowler-hatted stockbroker's clerk, wiping his eyes clear of tears of merriment. The CIA conspiracy turned out to be one of those rare issues that causes London tube travellers to talk to each other instead of gazing at advertisements for jobs as bank clerks.

'The only secret we've got is how to make passengers grow beards as they wait for trains," said one rather disloyal train guard.

'Rubbish," said a typist with acne. "We can show the Yanks how to keep filthy, old carriages in service long after they belong to the junk heap.'

The only person in Britain who seemed to take the spy threat seriously was Labor MP William Molloy, who said he would ask the prime minister about the alleged CIA plan to have American businessmen spy on air and land transportation developments in Britain, Canada, West Germany, France and the Soviet Union.

"These allegations must be thoroughly tested," Malloy thundered. "I consider the situation so serious that it merits an approach on prime minister-president level."

Joel Carl Welty, in his 'The Life of Birds' pub-lished in 1962, lists diving depths of 165 feet for loons, 120 feet for cormorants, 100 feet for ducks and about 70 feet for grebes — all based birds caught in fishing

While Grinnell's "near the surface" and "considerable depth" tells us nothing, those net records seem to say some-thing about the diving ability of the birds concerned.

Or do they? Because nets are known to be set at a certain depth, and that birds are found entangled in them when they are raised, does not mean that the birds were caught in the nets at that caught in the nets at that depth. They could just as easily have been caught near the surface when the net was being raised or lowered.

So having discredited circumstantial evidence in supporting the deep-dive hypothesis, I must now enlist support my moderate-depth

First, birds, like man, when diving are subject to the same limitations on their underwater movements. They must their activities but must also creasing pressure as they de-

And this energy balance between that expended to catch food and that recovered from eating the food caught means

Which brings me to the second circumstantial point in support of moderate dives, namely food.

Most of the food sought by diving birds — and food is the reason they dive — is found at moderate depths, probably between 15 and 30 feet down.

While pursuit may oc-casionally take birds below these limits there is seldom depths credited to them.

So there you have it; both cases remain unproved. For-tunately, we have at our dis-posal the technology — mod-ern diving gear — to settle ern diving gear — to settle the debate and I'm surprized it hasn't already begun to pro-

Canada in Quotation Marks

tions is a copious compendium of Canadianisms, cracks, canards and colloquial citations. It's also something of a publishing event in Canadian letters — a reference work, albeit a useful and amusing one at that, moving quickly up the bestseller lists at $15 the copy yet.

Canada has moved up into the big leagues with Bartlett's and the Oxford dictionary of quotations. Who would have thought that even 60 interesting sayings by Canadians or about Canada could be gathered together, let alone 6,000 as Colombo has done?

Prime Minister Trudeau alone gets just more than 100 entries over almost eight pages (the book is 735 pages long)—all the familiar quotes are there, from his dictum that the state has no place in the bedrooms of the nation and Fuddle Duddle to mangez de la merde and "Inflation has been beaten."

But did you know he also said: "An exciting party should have both blondes and brunettes." Or this, from 1968, pertinent in the present debate on MPs' salaries: "There are poor people in the cabinet, and there are certainly people in the cabinet that are getting poorer, I can tell you that."

But the strangest of his sayings has to be an utterance during the 1968 election campaign, in reply to someone who shouted out Vive la France! Trudeau yelled back: "Vive la France, et vive les Anglais, aussi. Et vive la republique des patates frites." (Translation of the last sentence: "Long live the republic of french fries.")

Our own provincial leaders also get a few mentions, more than the premiers of other provinces. For example, Premier William Davis of Ontario, Canada's richest and most populous province, apparently has said nothing memorable at all, and his predecessor John Robarts is likewise silent. The last few premiers of Quebec, including even the bland Robert Bourassa, are well represented.

Premier Dave Barrett, only 21/2 years in office, but a man with a mind for colorful phrases, gets half a dozen quotes in the book. "I'm the socialist hordes" is there, and his often-repeated waffle-pancakecrepe suzette joke which was used to good effect in the 1972 election campaign against W. A. C. Bennett, who gets seven mentions in "Those people in Ottawa couldn't run a peanut stand," 'said Bennett, in an epithet he also aimed at the provincial New Democratic Party. "Socialist barbarians are coming in through the back door," was another of his favorites. But his best remark is a reminiscence of his early years as a Tory: "They're all lawyers . . . They spend all their time changing commas, changing constitution and changing their leaders." Included in Colombo's book are quotations from A (Francis Abbott, the hermit of Niagara who lived on Goat Island near Niagara Falls and played his violin near the precipice and drowned there in 1831) to Z (Florenz Ziegfeld to Montreal-born actress Norma Shearer after she auditioned for him: "Go back to Canada and forget the stage.")

The French cynic Voltaire, who seems to have had a bee in his bonnet about Canada (then New France), has eight quotations included, mostly variations of his remark about Canada being just worthless snowy wastes. It is variously fifteen hundred leagues of frozen deserts, a few acres of snow and fifteen thousand acres of snow and ice. He also called our home and native land "a sinkhole in for money and a sponge for the blood of France."

The book goes from the ridiculous ("The real test of coffee is when it will float a four-bit piece" -Robert E. Gard) to the divine ("If the Maple Leaf is to wave proudly and freely over a prosperous and great Canada of the future, Canada must have a spiritual awakening from the Pacific to the Atlantic"—Billy Graham).

And did you know the Lone Ranger's sidekick Tonto was a Canadian? Jay Silverheels (born Harry Smith in 1920 near Brantford, Ont. on the Six Nations reserve) is in the book for just two famous words: "Kemo Sabe."

Canadian cities are mentioned -Rudyard Kipling called Victoria a pillar of strength and beauty, John Dos Passos said Toronto was "a beastly place," and the French poet Apollinaire dubbed Vancouver "a sparkling diamond."

There are omissions, inevitably. Colombo says he has another 6,000 quotes for a second volume. For such a true-blue Canadian enterprise, perhaps he'll include the best description of the difference between Canadians and Americans ever penned, from Sara Jeannette Duncan, turn of the century nove-

"Canadians-nice Canadiansare just as gentlemanly as they can be! They'll compare with anybody. Perhaps Americans have got more style, but Canadians are much better form, I think."

to the point EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Even when I include the organized write-in on the symphony's machina tions, nothing has aroused Times readers in recent months more than the proposed increase of MPs' salaries. So I thought it only right to ask our two local members how they plan to vote on the issue when it comes before the House of Neither Allan McKinnon, who repre sents Victoria for the Conservatives, or Donald Munro, who sits for Esquimalt-Saanich in the same party, would answer the question with a straightforward or "no". In fairness to both men, the bill incorporating the salary increases has gone to committee where it may be amended before third reading and a final vote.

"As the matter stands at the moment would oppose it on second reading,

But, "depending on the form of the bill and the nature of the amendments, the Esquimalt-Saanich member says he might vote for the measure. McKinnon's answer is predicated "on what kind of bill it will be."

Under proposed amendments to the ontentious bill MPs would receive a 33.3 per cent pay raise in their $18,000 annual salary, a one third increase in their $8,000 per year, tax free, non-acuntable expense payments, and beginning in 1976, pay raises equivalent to the rise in the industrial composite index.

On the basis of an annual 10 per cent rise in the index the amendments would give MPs $4,000 more than the initial 50 per cent proposal. "I'd probably have to find out how other members of my party felt about it," Munro said referring to the 33.3 per

"I would probably abstain. I might . . . I just don't know," he added.
"If they bring that in." McKinnon said in reference to the 33.3 clause, "I will vote for it.'

"If they don't, I will vote against it on second reading," he said. McKinnon grumbled that he and Munro were "catching more hell than most MPs," because of the large

Greater Victoria who tend to correlate the pay raise with the old age pension. "The whole thing is there was not enough time to consider the damn

' Munro said. McKinnon was even more adamant: 'I'm not going to quit if they don't raise the pay bill at all." The next day he added that he will even run again if there is no pay raise. Both MPs appear almost embarrassed by the whole issue, although they agree that some kind of pay raise is necessary, especially for younger MPs with growing families and huge, far flung rid-

Just how much is enough? "I feel a maximum of 30 per cent is enough," Munro said. McKinnon was a little more cautious.

"I would recommend a 25 per cent raise to our caucus."

And I'm sorry gentlemen, but I can't help saying it . . . this from members of a party which was trying to sell the country wage and price controls less than six months ago?

Yet the whole affair leaves one with the feeling of being adrift on a sea of contradictions. The Commons will vote themselves some kind of a raise, probably in excess of 30 per cent, unless the government yanks the bill in a fit of pique. And the same MPs who accepted the raise will criticize "inflationary settlements in the public sector" as the

Our Men On The Hill

Talk About Pay Raises

year progresses. Those of us who live most comfort-. ably in this inflationary economy — MPs, lawyers, doctors, and even newspaper editors — are the first persons to be outraged when British Columbia Railway workers, to use a current example, receive a 22 per cent increase over nine

Yes, it is high; it is inflationary. But 22 per cent on $10,000 is a lot less than 50 per cent of $18,000 which MPs are currently being paid. If all sectors of the economy, right across the board, keep insisting on a 15 to 20 per cent increase each year the disparity between top and bottom brackets of Canadian wage earners will grow enormously.

Even in these inflationary times anybody earning more than $20,000 per annum is comfortable, albeit not for long the way things are going.

For those persons making in excess of the magic figure to begrudge a shopcraft worker in Squamish, B.C., an increase that would bring him up to $12,000 or $14,000 per annum is hypocritical.

If there is to be restraint - and few people would disagree with that sentiment unless it strikes their own pocket book - it should start at the top if it is to be effective.

And among some honorable members, seems about as good and public a place as any to show that restraint

Pressing Pollution Problems?

The pollution control branch of the wholesalers and manufacthe provincial government sometimes appears to the interested outsider to be acting in an odd fashion, as a couple of recent examples show.

It is threatening a harsh crackdown on those despicable merchants continuing to bootleg pop cans with the pull-tab openers. They misjudged the number they could sell up to the Jan. 1 deadline and are left with surpluses which turers refuse to take back.

Instead of threatening prosecution of these dangerous offenders, couldn't the PCB hold off until supplies have been exhausted? Granted, the pop-top rings are a hazardous nuisance on beaches and in parks, but it's hardly the province's most pressing pollution problem.

Example number two - the PCB is going to conduct a "quality and quantity" study of litter on B.C. highways this summer with several test sites around the province. According to an official, the branch hopes to gain some knowledge of the make-up of litter, and specifically to try to determine whether pull-tab openers on fruit juice and pudding cans - not banned yet in B.C. - are as serious a problem as pop cans.

Doubtless, we'd all be interested to know. But is this really a good use of the PCB's resources when our lakes, rivers, and cities remain polluted?

We will find there the complete form in embryo of the flower cluster just waiting for the spring sunshine. Before we move on, let's look on the ground among the grasses and sedges for here may be found many different kinds of life - the rushes with their smooth tapered stems and the sedges with their rather three-sided leaves that will cut you if you attempt to pull them off. Let's search among the root system - we can find many things there that animals, just moving around in their own environment living their life as was intended, each and everyone fulfilling its

We will be sure to find some flying creatures as they hover among the stems. Remember too that they are carrying out their destiny.

There are bound to be some slugs reeping along the ground in search of food, mainly decaying plants. This little animal is mainly shunned by man, although slugs are very valuable to the whole scheme of things and we would be surprised if we understood just where they fit in.

Let us lift up our eyes and see what is overhead for there is always something moving — a tiny nuthatch, or perhaps a chickadee. They too are fulfilling their tasks of making this wonderful beautiful green world a haven and a resting place for us.

Perhaps if you move slowly you may disturb a ruffed grouse, who will fly up vanish from view. We don't think you'll see it again.

And perhaps you will be more than lucky and suddenly spot a deer going down to drink or browse along the edge

Remember Foreign Aid?

Foreign aid is 25 years old this week. It was born in the Senate Chamber of Ceylon on Jan. 9, 1950, when the countries of the Commonwealth began a series of meetings out of which came what we know today as the Colombo other before—to relieve di-saster, reconstruct war-shattered economies as in the Marshall Plan, obtain favors in return for bribes. But not until that conference at Co-lombo did the wealthy members of the family of na-tions pledge themselves to assist their poor relations not spasmodically, not gruog-ingly, but in-a process of continuous transfusion of capital

scribed the scene - the Senate building "shimmering white in the heat of a tropical spectators watched the arrival of delegates, completely unaware as indeed were the delegates themselves that from this conference would emerge the beginning of something which was to have an important impact on their individual lives. This wildly optimistic assessment of the effect of Colombo Plan aid on the peoples of South and South-East Asia, its intended benefi-ciaries — their "individual ciaries — their "individual lives" have hardly been touched by it all — comes from Sir Percy Spender, the foreign minister of Australia and on his own telling the founding father of the plan. founding father of the plan.

Self-effacement is among the less prominent of Australian traits, and Spender's memoirs are unblushingly replete with testimonials to his Affairs in the world today. They contain as well unflattering references to Canada's representatives.

L. B. Pearson, who led our delegation at Colombo, is por-trayed as "cautious and circumspect ... not at that time, or since in my view, gifted in the art of politics." Robert Mayhew, who led our delegation at the follow-up conference in Sydney, is remembered as "a man of fewwords" — not in Spender's book a compliment. The Canadians, for their part, were not enamored of their Australian colleague. Pearson in his memoirs refers gency. For Australia, Spender wanted to get the Colombo Plan show on the road. For Canada, Pearson wanted to proceed with caution.

God moves in a mysterious way. From a Colombo Plan sceptic. Canada became a Coombo Plan enthusiast. Quickforgotten were cautionary tales about "Grandiose schemes of development" as Pearson backed our funding of the most grandiose of all Colombo Plan projects—the great dam at Warsak in West Pakistan. At the close of his career he had become the dean of what has been called — more in anger than in sorrow — the "liberal developmentalists," at whom the social critic Ivan Illych has delivered a withering attack. "The plows of the rich can to as much harm as their swords ... Once the Third World has become a. mass market for the goods, between demand for these Western artifacts and the supply will increase indefinitely. The family car cannot drive the poor into the jet age, nor can the family refrigerator in-sure healthy food for them." What of the prospects for the Colombo Plan's second quarter century? These seem far from bright. Recipients of aid are surly and resentful. The most hopeful develop ment for Colombo Plan aid recipients is the sudden emergence of a new set of potentia donors — the petrodollar king-doms of Saudi Arabia, Iran. Abu Dhabi and the rest of the oil-rich Arab states.

Are their capitals buzzing with schemes to take over the philanthropy, contriving a Riydah Plan to replace or s upplement the Colombo Plan? Not so as you'a notice.

All that exists at presentand only so far unofficially is a scheme for an "OPEC Mutual Investment Trust." the purpose of which is to channel Arab petrodollars into the Western world, not into the under-developed econo-mies of the Third World.

"Particularly at presently depressed levels of equity prices," enthuse the promot ers of this scheme, one of whom is an Iranian central offset to the erosion of infla-tion, through the purchase of shares in the leading concerns of Western Europe, North America, Japan and Austra lia." Freely translated, this means that the rich get rich-er and the poor get children. The wretched of the earth the stockpile of King Midas are designed for the rich by they will get it.

It is just that the town as a whole has always been earthy and direct: functional, not much given to outward elegance. And so, life tends to focus in-

Often it is focused in the thousands of bars around the city. Much of neighborhood life is centred there.

One such place is Watts' Club Mozambique on the northwest side. Crowds, predominantly black, flock there to hear live jazz. Members of the Detroit Pistons are regular patrons, as are some politicians and many, many autoticians and many, many auto workers who have grown ac-customed to living well during the good times of the last dec-

Oliver Dickerson was there the other night, though. He is a 35-year-old Chrysler worker, one of the hundreds of thousands of blacks who make up about half of the city's popularion of 1.5 million, and a member of what is perhaps the most affluent black community in the country.

Dickerson is also one of some 50,000 Detroit-area auto workers who were laid off in 150,000 more in other parts of hommes grenouilles", as the French call them). It wasn't the rubber that attracted me or it wasn't mainly the rubber. It was the politics of the thing. Frogmen are highly political animals, and in parts of the world like South East Asia, where it is wise to be amphibious, they have an important role to play. One is always reading in the press of the exploits of the Viet Cong frogmen - blowing up bridges, mining ships. But what does it all mean? What, as they say, is it all about? I decided to investigate.

The bus service in South Vietnam is terrific. I take my hat off to it. I take my hat off partly because, if one doesn't take one's hat off, it's bound to get knocked off in the general scrum. I find that it is unwise to sit at the back of the bus, among the catfish and poultry, and rather frightening to sit at the front. The best place is the middle, where there is no room for your legs. The service is regular, in the sense that the buses set off frequently, frequently arrive and stop at every opportunity along the way.

The journey is a series of refreshment pauses, as the vendors climb aboard and scream "Boiled Crab!" or "Shrimp Pancake!" in your ear. On promising stretches of clear road, ingenious commercial ambushes are arranged. One woman had placed her baby in the middle of our path, as if to say: "Either you buy my rather indifferent madeira cake or you run over my child. The choice is yours." Our driver had the reverence of life that I believe is sometimes associated with Buddhism, so we stopped.

The journey was utterly tedious, and in its latter stages became relatively expensive. This was because of the frogmen, who had blown up several bridges along the way. Thieu's army is admirably equipped to meet such emerBy JAMES FENTON New Statesman gencies but considers that it should be paid for its efforts, so we were charged extra for the pontoon ferries.

We raced against time to make our destination by nightfall, but the sun set on our attempt and it was pitch dark when we arrived at the last ferry, to be told that we should have to spend the night in the village. The occupants of the bus dispersed among the straw huts; the guns began to fire into the void; we settled down to a long conversation with the military and police chiefs, as a result of which we were invited to go fishing the next day. There was a rare and highly prized species of crab to be found nearby.

Of course, said our friends as we prepared to set out, we could use gre-nades, but it is so wasteful of stocks, don't you think? We agreed solemnly, but I noticed as we got into the dinghy were two blocks of "plastique," one hand-grenade and a landing-net.

jagged limestone islands in the sea, lit the fuses of the plastique with cigarette ends, retired to a safe distance and watched. The first explosion brought up succeeded in stunning about 60 sprats and one or two larger items. We decided, rather to my relief, not to use the grenade. We never found the rare and highly prized species of crab.

On our return we found that the village was being visited by some senior police officers, who were very keen o discuss the problems of Vietnam. When the Americans were here," they said, for instance, "this bridge would have been rebuilt in one day. Now ..."
They shrugged. They said that it was impossible to continue the battle against the Viet Cong without more supplies. I questioned this, pointing out that the soldiers where we were had spent the whole night firing against a

"Crude?"

"Yes, crude." He spoke the word with a dreadful scowl.

"What do you mean -crude?"

"Well," he said, "take these frogmen. They don't use proper equipment. They just put a clip on their nose, tie up a bit of rubber hose to breathe through, attach stones to their feet as weights, and walk along the bottom of the river.
We have found out from intelligence that is how they blew up these bridges. It's quite impossible to see them coming. Very crude."

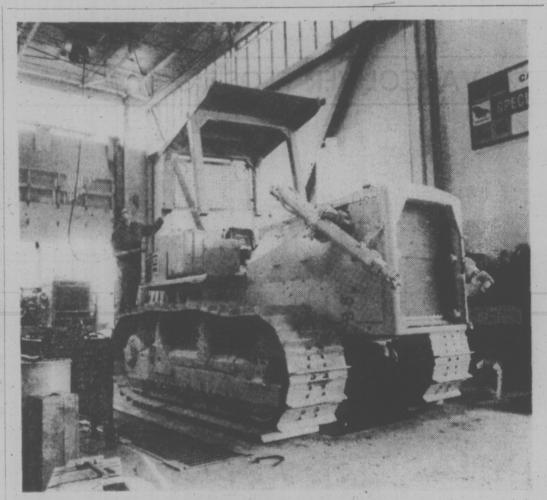

'Ye-e-e-s. It does sound awful, I "Ye-e-e-s. It does sound awful, I admit. But why don't you do the same thing in return? You wouldn't need much equipment. I'm sure you could find enough rubber hose."

The officer looked at me with utter contempt. "That would be quite impossible," he said.

He was of course quite right. It occurred to me afterwards that it was far too late to expect him and his like to start walking around on river-beds wearing improvised snorkels. It wasn't war as the term is generally under-stood. It wasn't dignified. But it pointed out, I thought, the difference between the two sides in this conflict. On the one hand there were those who went fishing with plastique, on the other—frogmen. The ingenuity employed on either side was enormous, and always had been.

But while the Viet Cong employed their ingenuity in prosecuting the war, their opponents became distracted by other things. The revolution was serendipitous. It had thrived on good simple ideas, even if, in order to finish the job. it would need heat-seeking missiles. It was born out of poverty and kept going on good thinking: the Ho Chi Minh sandal, the Ho Chi Minh bicycle and now the Ho Chi Minh snorkel. Very crude. effective. That is why the Viet Cong will eventually win.

The one thing that small businesses have in common with the tycoons who, to-gether with others in a group, control a large public com-pany, is the fear of the death of one of their partners or co-

Apart from the loss of man-agement skill, the possible weakening of the company's credit position with financiers and of having to seek approval of business decisions from the deceased's executors or family, there are tremendous financial difficulties for the company and its shareholdcaused by the death, because of the tax system.

For example, the estate faces death capital gains tax and provincial succession duty on the value of the deceased's shares at the date of death. If the tax bill is high, the estate may need cash, the deceased may have debts that are called in on his passing. In either case, the estate may want to sell the shares.

cerned about te problems of an unknown new partner, if the estate proposes to sell to a stranger.

The survivors may wish to extract funds from the company, by dividends, to raise the cash to buy the deceased's share. This, too, can create problems — if dividends are taken they must be paid to all shareholders, and if the com-pany is a widely held public corporation, it may not be able to afford the working capital loss.

In any event, the extraction of funds from the company requires heavy income taxes on the dividends:

As a result of experience with these problems, the practice has grown whereby individuals who do the business in a group almost always have a death buy-out agreement a mongst the members, whereby it is provided that when one member dies, the surviyors will buy out his interest in the group.

In order to provide funds for the purchase, and avoid some of the fiscal strain on the group's resources, ment is supported by life in-surance. That is, the group collectively insures the life of each member, and on any-one's death collects the proceeds, uses the money to pay to the estate in exchange for his shares, and thus control is kept intact.

ployed by knowledgeable businessmen for many years, but since tax reform, the in-troduction of capital gains tax, the abolition of federal stituted with provincial gift and death tax, nany refine-ments are being counselled for this time-honored device.

The refinements revolve around the question of who should own the life insurance and pay the premiums. For instance, if the individuals themselves own the policies, themselves own the policies, then upon collecting and buying out the deceased's interest, they, being presumably of advanced years themselves, will increase their estates by the value of life insurance they we collected, and by the growth in value in the shares they've bought, between date of purchase and their own demise.

This creates potential death and capital gains taxes for the survivors. In some cases, it is advisable to have trusts for their wives and children to own the insurance on the partners and be the buyers under a death buy-sell. At least this prevents a further rises on the issue of whether or not the insurance policies should be owned by the individuals themselves or the

In the first place, all accumulated earnings up to December 31, 1971, must have been paid out and taxed at 15 per cent before the insurance proceeds can be paid out tax-free as a capital dividend. Also, in order to avoid the a tax on "excessive elec-tions," it is advisable to wait until the next fiscal year after when they themselves the insurance proceeds have been received. The death buy-out agreement should provide for this deferral.

While it's complicated having the Insurance owned by the company, there are offsetting tax advantages. For example, if the premiums are paid by the individuals and they are in, say, the 50 per cent tax bracket, on the top end of their earnings, they end of their earnings, they would have to earn $10,000 to pay a $5,000 premium. If the company earns less than pany, then it is taxed at only 25 per cent.

Thus, the company would have to earn only about $6,800 to have the $5,000 left after taxes, to pay the insurance premium. The saving of $3,000 per year for twenty or thirty years can amount to a sub-stanial amount. There are many other variations on the theme, all of which should be carefully con-sidered. There are literally thousands of death buy-out agreements in force in Canada, with many thousands being created each year as new business associations are created. It is worthwhile to have these reviewed in the light of the current tax law, to determine if the plans es-tablished years ago are still obtaining the best possible tax results.

A third mock-up is being stress-tested to destruction.

The Dash 7, a four-engine airliner that will carry 50 passengers, takes off and lands on a 2,000-foot runway. A conventional jet airliner requires up to 10,000 feet.

This means STOL ports can be built near downtown areas of large cities and near

In short, a superbook. It deserves the widest possible audience, especially on this coast where the ramifications of oil tanker coast where the ramifications of oil tanker traffic are so perilous.

With due respect to David Anderson and his one-man crusade, nothing before has brought home to me with such force the threat that this traffic poses.

Author Noel Mostert makes a convincing case for the establishment of a strong international body to enforce rigid standards of construction and handling of tankers. But he concedes that it may already be too late and that agreement between the nations concerned will be difficult to achieve.

that agreement between the nations con-cerned will be difficult to achieve.

"Whichever way one looked at it,' he says, "one confronted the knowledge of disas-trous shortcoming on every level of ships and seamanship, and not much apparent pros-pect of retrieving the situation."

Since Mostert wrote those words the out-

Since Mostert wrote those words the outlook if anything has become worse. An energy shortage panic, deliberately nurtured by the oil companies, has made skittery politicians more than ready to go along with dangerous shortcuts to get the oil to market faster. The recent U.S. decision to allow single-bottom tankers is just one example.

Mostert boarded the 214,000-ton P. and O. Line tanker Ardshiel in France and sailed with it (these lumbering, impersonal barges are no longer referred to as "she") empty around Africa, into the Persian Gulf to load, and back again.

This typical voyage took six weeks, during which there was virtually no contact with shore. Even the loading was done at an offshore installation. Mostert compares it to

Also lost is the sailor's traditional relationship with the sea. The wheelhouse is more than 100 feet above the water and a quarter of a mile from the bow.

Mostert contends that development of the big tankers represents the end of an era in shipping as significant as the change from

"They have brought monotony and a feeling of loss to the maritime horizons and, as a result, a certain dispirited mood to those such as myself who like to sit upon a seashore and doze and dream and watch the ships go by," he says wistfully.

But Mostert's mourning is more than mere nostalgia. He says the size of the tankers contributes to a loss of respect for the sea and the weather and heightens the likelihead of widen. The mortal health of likelihood of mishap. The mental health of captains, officers and seamen who may never leave the ship for periods of up to a year and who are subject to unique pressures of boredom and depression, is often questionable.

The increasing reliance on computers and automation — Mostert foresees the day when million-ton tankers may move over the seas unmanned — is not reassuring. Automation in most cases is just an economy measure to make more profit for the owner.

The Ardshiel was a comparatively well-maintained, well-disciplined ship and Mostert's trip was uneventuful, but it gave him intimations of hew agailty ecolusions.

intimations of how easily collisions, fires, or breakdowns can occur.

breakdowns can occur.

Supertankers are built to be written off in 10 years. After that they are usually sold to small charter outfits who register under the Panama or Liberian "flags of convenience" with a corresponding decline in rules of operation as the ship's equipment deteriorates. The chances of accident are greatly increased during the versel, except, except. increased during the vessel's second genera-

'Like nothing else that ever sailed the seas'

A South African, Mostert is particularly concerned about the effects of tanker traffic along the coasts of his native land and in the nearby southern seas, which generate much of the life in all the oceans.

Fish and birds and the microscopic sea life on which they feed are destroyed not only by the big, well-publicized tanker crack-ups but perhaps even more so by the persistent spillage of oil in small amounts.

These include bilge-cleaning (from all ships, not just tankers) and the flushing out of oil tanks. This has proved almost impossible to police on the high seas. There is evidence that after the Torrey Canyon and Arrow groundings other tankers dumped their oily swill in the vicinity of the wreck to avoid detection.

"With such scruples, what hope have we got?" Mostert asks. "None, it would appear, if we have to depend upon much of the modern maritime conscience."

He also raises the question of what happens when oil slicks are blown or moved by currents out to sea. Shore-watchers cheer when this happens, but the unseen damage may be greater than if the oil had come on the beaches where it can be cleaned up.

The dissoluble toxic chemicals in crude oil may kill fish outright or cause damage to may kill inso ourright or cause damage to their brains or nervous systems. Scientists aren't sure, but the homing or spawning in-stincts may be affected. The Pacific salmon industry is obviously vulnerable to this threat. (The big tankers also represent another kind of danger to our offshore fishermen fishboats have been run down in the night or in fog without those on board the big ships being aware of the collision). Mostert blames the depredations of oil spills on "the unhindered greed of a few unscrupulous and unprincipled tycoons, companies, corporations, and . . . the companion immorality of their abused and uninterested

In their pursuit of profits the tanker operators cut corners in construction which greatly increase the chance of accident. Often only one boiler and screw are installed, which means that in the event of mechanical breakdown the tankers are totally helpless and likely to drift ashore.

Supertankers are not easily manoeuvred under the best conditions, requiring three miles to stop from a speed of 16 knots, and the single screw makes them even less responsive at slow speeds.

Because of the pounding of waves against the unyielding hull and the wear of corrosion from the oil within, special strengthening measures are desirable but seldom provided.

Canada is singled out for praise by Mosterf for the controls we have imposed on tanker traffic in coastal waters, but that is faint comfort when we are at the mercy of others engaged in inter-ocean traffic. And new dangers loom on the horizon with the new dangers loom on the horizon with the increased use of tankers to carry chemicals and liquefied natural gas.

Mostert concludes gloomily that "the world's seas cannot be expected to survive the oil ships if they continue to be built to and operated and sailed by the sort of standards that now largely prevail. At any rate, what is left of the seas by the time they have close with them might not be worth the havdone with them might not be worth the hav-

Critic's Choice For the Year

By PAT BARCLAY

This week I'd like to take a backward glance at what were, for me at any rate, the best Canadian books of 1974. My field of choice has been limited books of 19/4. My field of choice has been limited somewhat by time and availability and (let's out with it) personal preconceptions, but it is still my belief that the following selections were the brightest and best and worth recalling, for a variety of reasons:

1) Roch Carrier's They Won't Demolish Me! (Anansi). Carrier's novel contains a winning combination of poetry, satire, color and seriousness of purpose. Expect for Deputy the hero Carrier's characters are all cept for Dorval, the hero, Carrier's characters are all preposterous, yet there is nothing cardboard about them. Carrier can control without giving the impression he's manipulating, and that's a rare skill.

2) Something I've Been Meaning to Tell You, by

Alice Munro (McGraw-Hill Ryerson). Munro's stories repay the close attention they demand. One can grow weary of the unavoidably bourgeois soul-searching that goes on in most Canadian fiction (although as the rich keep getting richer and the poor keep getting poorer this characteristic of our literature is in for a change), but Munro's perceptions are too fine to cloy easily. her, people matter. It's a great strength

3) The Diviners, by Margaret Laurence (McClelland and Stewart). Her best since The Stone Angel and the most ambitious of all her books in its breadth and purpose. There's so much content in The Diviners that it's not easy to absorb it all in one reading, and making it all cohere, but it's still an important and

4) Sawbones Memorial, by Sinclair Ross (McClelland and Stewart). Readers whose opinion of the medioal profession has become tinged with cynicism over the years may take a while to adjust to this novel written in its praise. It's nostalgia, granted, but it's well and detective thrillers in general.

6) The Lark in the Clear Air, by Dennis T. Patrick Sears (McClelland and Stewart). The style is the novel, at least in this case. Sears has some newspaper experience behind him, which helps explain why this first novel showed remarkable skill at a certain kind of prose. His writing is homely, bawdy and poetic by turns, and it's strong enough to make a banal story

7) Tales from the Smokehouse, edited by Herbert T. Schwarz (Hurtig). This collection of erotic Indian stories — some mythic, others contemporary, all told with sensitivity and quiet skill - could well become a classic. Tales is an entertainment with unexpected depth. Taken as a whole, the stories are an eloquent expression of Indian life as it affects, and is affected

8) Salt of the Earth, by Heather Robertson (James Lorimer). All regions of Canada should receive the sort of meticulous attention which Heather Robertson has focussed on the history of prairie settlement. As democratized history her book is continuously engrossing, with its catalogue of real-life dramas described by the actors themselves. The many phoscribed by the actors themselves. The tographs are at least as valuable as the text

9) A Nation Unaware, by Herschel Hardin (J. H. Douglas). Easily the most important non-fiction work of the year, it has been described as "the best overall discussion on Canadian economic history to have appeared in a decade" by economist Abraham Rotstein. This judgment is the more remarkable because Hardin himself expresses the opinion that economics is much too important a study to be left to the economists. In brief, his central thesis argues that Canadians are the creators of an original, indigenous economic culture based on public enterprise and interregional redistribution. If you still occasionally wonder why W. A. C. Bennett behaved like a socialist, Hardin has the expla-

100 Actually there isn't any number 10, even though all the "best books" lists doubtless include one Nine good books should be enough for you, anyway. And nine good Canadian books in any one year is better than a good showing, it's positively respectable.

'Blue Sky Takes a Wife' in Tales from the Smokehouse

Myth and Reality

By SUSAN MUSGRAVE

Tales From The Smokehouse is one of the most exciting collections of Indian legends I've ever read. Drawn from Ojibwa, Mohawk, Naskapi and other tribes, these mostly erotic stories all contain some delight fully cunning and exuberant twist. As the cunning and exuberant twist. As the title indicates, the tales are told while group of Indians offer themselves to the spirit of the smokehouse, or sweat-lodge. The stories are drawn up around a social or or moral "truth" which illustrates how those who partake of incest, bestiality, polygamy or other acts of "immoral behavior" are duly cepts a white man's firewater and afterwards his woman, he returns to his village to plant the seeds of disease in his own beloved

When Wa-hanata's husband discovers that his wife's lover is a bear he kills the animal at once and the woman becomes a lonely ghost. When a great chief returns from the dead to sleep with his own daughter, the star-shaped birthmark on his left buttock reveals him and he is beaten and sent in shame from the village. An evil man who seduces young virgins is made prematurely old and impotent and a bad medicine woman has her head smashed in because she copucases the white man is the bringer of unhappiness. He tricks, ribs, cheats, exploits, toxicates and infects the Indian, who no interprets the other's motives until after it's

All the stories are illustrated by Daphne Odjig, whose half-human shape-shifting creations lend themselves quite impressively to the storytellers' visions.

Frances Robinson, in her introduction to Visitors Who Never Left, wrote that "what might be difficult to acknowledge openly. such as immoral behavior, can be handled satisfactorily by myth." Herbert Schwarz de-molishes the notion that Rabelaisian sexuality was frowned on by the Indian cultures, and shows us vividly how sexual realism and mythic vitality are, as it were, congenial Visitors Who Never Left is first of all a misleading title. When I picked the book up I was expecting another story about the conquering white man; in fact this is a collection of the myths of Damelahamid, an "Indian utopia," lying between the Nass and the Skeena Rivers in northern B.C. The myths Skeena Rivers in northern B.C. The myths were originally taped in Tsomalia (the mother tongue of the people of this area), translated into "Gitksan" by Mrs. Irene Harris and then put into English and written down by Chief Kenneth Harris.

In many cases there are Indian words for which there are no English against and which there are no English equivalents and these have retained their Indian form in the stories. Frances Robinson, the collaborator, has included comparisons with myths collected by Boas, Swanton and Robinson.

Some of the stories deal with the origin of the people of Damelahamid. There are lessons to demonstrate various laws that the people are expected to abide by such as having respect for animals and never killing them indiscriminately. The Origin of the Thunderbird tells what happens following an incestuous relationship. Each time a law is broken the punishment is both "swift and severe". The last story in the book describes how the culture of the people of Damelahaspread to the Haida on the Queen Char

I would question the collaborator's impli-cation that this collection is superior to others on the grounds that it was translated by an Indian and therefore from a Indian point of view. The myths are related in a simple straightforward manner, as she points out, but their dryness and lack of vital energy tend to make them dull reading. A good storyteller will engage his audience — manipulate them, tease them — anything to hold their attention, to keep them wide awake.

Don McLean Showpiece

By TOM NOLAN

At last Don McLean has made a thoroughly appealing album that properly showcases his impressive strengths - sincerity, good humor, a lovely naive romanticism — while allowing him only fleeting moments of those traits that have pre-viously proved embarrassing: a self-congratulatory streak that can slip into paranoia. and a starry-eyed gushing of words that don't always parse. Homeless Brother ad-mirably fulfills the task of making McLean once again a credible artist. It erases any memory of his depressed comedown from the pheno-menal success of "American Pie," while putting to rest the nagging notion that that catchy flagwaver was the one flash in a lucky folkie's pan.

The album's centerpiece suite is a loose trio of tunes consisting of McLean's title song, George Harrison's "Sunshine Life for Me" and another McLean song, "The Legend of Andrew McCrew. Together they comprise a pic-ture of life on the road that is at once expose,, glamorization

The humming presence on 'Homeless Brother' of that university-bred wandering minstrel, Pete Seeger, empha sizes the pseudo-poeticized aspect of this hobo tradition McLean is working: This whole on-the-road mystique is just distanced and idealized enough to serve as the perfect conceptual vehicle for a post-Dylan descendant of Guthrie, and "Brother" neatly weds Woody's hard traveling with some Hattie Carroll-era fingerpointing, making it all 'relevant' to today.

"Sunshine Life for Me" is spare and sparkling, with Don on banjo over Ralph McDon-ald's apt tabla licks: This paean to wandering lightens the mood created by the previous track and puts it in per-

"Andrew McCrew," eerie and droll account of an sideshow attraction, might well have been a maudlin di-saster, considering the sub-ject matter and McLean's past propensities: Instead, it's a mordantly comic, darkly swinging drinker's song, with the kind of warped night-jazz feel that Tom Waits excels at creating. McLean has soundly and safely brought us back from his nostalgic reverie.

The rest of the album is full of delight. "La La Love You." an inconsequential and entirely infectious bit of fluff, is a pure pop creation: The perfect car radio song, it even contains the de rigeur pre-pubescent bit of "daring" wordplay. "Wonderful Baby" is a lullaby worthy of a Busby Berkeley fantasy, with infants floating by on clouds and fe-male angels sighing big breezes. "You have Lived," a slightly pompous love song, is lyrically a bit specious, and "Tangled (Like a Spider in Her Hair)" gets tangled in its own ungainly imagery. But "Crying in the Chapel, cappella match for the Persuasions, is a full-throated treat. "Did You Know," the finale, has McLean singing emotionally but restrainedly over simple guitar and some tenor sax noodling: It's a lovely cut, and a fine example of what throughout has been Joel Dorn's consistently well-

Sherrill's orchestral melodramas: His honeyed voice hardly needs the sweetening.

The Silver Fox, Rich's newest. Sherrill-produced opus, gives some idea of the problem. One side features five country creampuffs, overarranged by Sherrill, while the other showcases Rich's "versatility" in a studio simulation of Charlie's stage show, right down to the patter.

It's been some year for Charlie Rich. Not so long ago, Rich was a country-western also-ran with two pop hits to his credit ("Lonely Week-ends" in 1959 and "Mohair Sam" in 1965) and a modest cult following. The release of Behind Closed Doors and the two gold singles it contained (the title track and "The Most Beautiful Girl") changed all that. With Behind Closed Doors approaching the 3-million mark in sales, Rich has grabbed every C and W award in sight, established himself as a Las Vegas show-stopper and become an institution on middle-of-the-road as well as country-western radio stations.

He has been marketed as a velvet-voiced "countrypoli-tan" (any southern crooner with a muffled twang). Although he is a gifted pianist as well as composer, Rich's most recent albums have featured his singing exclusively, usually in lush settings. (Very Special Love Songs). As a consequence, Rich has recorded few of his new songs, and on most tracks he hasn't even played piano.

Rich's success has created a dilemma. Here is a master of blues and, yes, country-

'EARTHQUAKE'

A Movie That Shakes You Up

A Film Review by MARY SPARACIO

Was it Universal Studios that used to boast that they had "more stars than there and "more stars than there are in the Heavens"? It certainly may be said of their latest film Earthquake, with Charlton Heston, Ava Gardner, George Kennedy, Lloyd Nolan and, as they say, "a bost of others".

It would seem that The Poseidon Adventure has given birth to many children. We look around town and can choose the diaster we'd most like to attend. Earthquake is very entertaining

It would seem that for the time being, the studios have moved back to the epic picture to lure people away from home and the glowing box. I was skeptical at first with their very old-fashioned approach, but it still works.

Earthquake is not as contained in as small a space as was "Poseidon" or "Inferno". Yet is is much more interesting for its imagination and what it sets out to do to the audience; which is to feel a part of the earthquake as you

For many years previously, the only notification require-ment was for newspaper aqpublic hearing. If some unfortunate homeowner missed the particular ad, remained blissfully unaware of the re-soning proposal and the hear-ing, and eventually found a massive highrise going up next door — well, my friend, that was just too bad.

But all that changed in April, 1973, when the NDP government brought in an amendment requiring all "owners and occupiers" of real estate potentially affected by any rezoning or land-use contract to be positified in use contract to be notified in

The revised legislation left it open to municipalities to define in their own bylaws the actual area within which people had to be alerted, and Vic toria duly stipulated that this whould be within a 200-foot radius of the area proposed

Fine and dandy, said the municipalities, but how do we keep track of a constantly shifting te n a n t population? And just think of all that paperwork! While rezoning a in accordance with the act, it was something else again to figure out all those 200-foot radii in a massive rezoning program like the James Bay epic of 1973.

But there was a still-bigger headache for municipal plan-ning officials and legal adning officials and legal advisors: the fear that a key rezoning might be quashed by the courts if even one entitled citizen could show that he had not been notified in advance.

To simplify matters, the Union of B.C. Municipalities suggested the reference in the act to "pocupiers" be deleted.

act to "occupiers" be deleted, leaving only property owners to be informed. The government's response wasn't quite what was expected. In the fall legislative session of 1973, there was a one-word deletion all right — but of "owners," not "occupiers."

Thus | arose the situation where property owners were - and still are - entirely ignored under certain circumstances. For instance, a person living in Victoria but own-

have to be automatically informed if that municipality proposes to rezone adjoining land to industrial use. In that case the notification goes only to the "occupier" concerned (his tenants) and if they don't forward the letter to him he doesn't have a clue what's going on unless he happens to see the newspaper

The only relief offered by the government last year, in the way of amendments, were tions could be delivered rather than mailed; and that no bylaw could be quashed if some occupiers had not been court's satisfaction that it had made "all reasonable efforts" fo mail or deliver notices.

But other problems surfaced for municipalities in 1974, following a B.C. Supreme Court test case on a Victoria zoning bylaw amendment.

In essence, the dispute centred on the precise definition of the word "rezoning" in the Municipal Act. The plain-tiffs in the case, operators of four Gorge Road motels, four Gorge Road motels, claimed that the city's action in changing motel zone regu-fations constituted a rezoning, and as such they should have been notified.

All this lengthy preamble helps to explain Victoria's current obsession with playing it safe — even if that means a complete mail-drop operation for which the Post Office bill alone is $866. Add to that about 60 reams machine for three days at $6.60 per hour and, not least, the staff time of one full-time ing all of the people all of the time soon mounts up.

On this occasion it could be argued that there is at least partial justification for the expense, as one of the seven proposed bylaws mentioned will rezone hundreds of properties in the downtown area. But what about other times and other less significant and they're trying to come up with solutions.

Couldn't the officials in the department of the municipal affairs minister devise a simpler yet effective system of notification?

championship match.

The Minnesota coach, a two-time loser in these gaudy spectacles, gave an indication Friday of his uptight postures with the Lombardi Trophy, emblematic of the National Football League championship. The reason?

"I did that before," he said.
"I picked it up five years ago and I don't want to do it again.' Grant, former coach of Winnipeg Blue bombers of the Ca-nadian Football league, ob-viously saw something mystica in touching the trophy in 1970 because the Vikings lost

What is expected to be a what is expected to be a factor, though, is the probable absence of Dwight White, Pittsburgh's big defensive end and one of the driving forces of the Steelers' front four which led the NFL in quarterback sacks with 52.

White was in hospital for four days with a viral infection, released hursday, then readmitted Friday morning.

He is listed as doubtful for the game.

The oddsmakers think that staying away from the silver-ware won't help Grant and his Vikings. They've been three-point underdogs to the Steelers almost since the day the two teams qualified for this game.

There's a difference of $7,500 a man riding on Sunday's game. Each winner will pocket $15,000 and each loser $7,500.

Football: Voodoo Or the Vikings?

The Minnesota defence has been likened to "rush hour at a subway", while Pittsburgh Steelers only gave up 29 yards rushing to Oakland in the American Football Conference playoff. Minnesota has the best "average-yards-gained per pass" in the NFL and the Steelers are No. 1 against the pass.

Which, among other sundry statistics, is by way of in-ducing the two contesting teams for Sunday's Super Bowl In New Orleans.

And also, if you wish, to suggest the winner beforehand, from the same source which gave you Edmonton over Montreal in the Grey Cup, and everyone remembers how upset-

Still, this is the biggie below the line, and could be awfully exciting, or very dull, because as everyone knows "you can-not win championship games if you cannot run the football".

And judging by the defensive records of these two clubs, neither is going to run very far against the other. So it could be very physical . . . from boredom . . . four plays and a commercial . . . or it could be as the Detroit mystic said: Pittsburgh 31-10.

I don't know if you caught the item or not, but before the Oakland game Pittsburgh running back John Fuqua, who has been sidelined after undergoing surgery on both wrists, consulted with a mystic, Mama Haiti, on the result of the game. Because, naturally, Mama, in her business, knows every-

Mama Knows What To Say

And hadn't she, on other occasions, helped people in her neighborhood play the numbers, and win. Sure, she had. So Fuqua asked her to "help us whip Oakland" and gave her $25

Mama took the money, got the message and told Fuqua the Steelers would win 28-7. The actual score was 24-13, which was close enough for Fuqua. So last week he hustled back to Mama, handed her $50 this time, and asked her to insure a Mama fondled the bills, and agreed. She told him the Steelers would triumph 31-10. Then she instructed him to write the score on a piece of paper, put the paper, covered by a glass of water under his bed the night before the game, and all would be right with the world.

And thus, by such fits of fancy, final forecasts are made and, if you want what Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll thinks of the idea, here is his motto: "Whatever it takes, and if a little voodoo helps, well, why not?"

Meanwhile, if Pittsburgh is the official choice by about three, it is because they ran so well and completely dominated the game against Oakland. Franco Harris ran for 111 yards and Rocky Beleier for 98, but more important they controlled the ball. Besides, quarterback Terry Bradshaw called a masterful game; and if the other surprise wasn't how Pittsburgh stopped the Oakland attack, it was how the Steelers were able to dominate the line of scrimmage, both ways.

Whether they can do the same against Minnesota and especially its awesome foursome on defence remains to be seen because this is a veteran unit that will give little and then only grudgingly.

Why Right Will Prevail

On the other side of the field, what about the Yikings? Will they be able to move against Pittsburgh's equally fine defence anchored by mean Joe Greene? The Steelers don't think so, but against Los Angeles Rams the Vikings were up against the best defence in their conference.

Fran Tarkenton, the Minnesota quarterback, said after the game "The Rams had the best defence we played against this season, and last season." So the Vikings finally won against L.A., in a close one for sure, but they won by doing more things right than wrong. And that is their system.

Then there is the thought that the Vikes do have the runners in Chuck Foreman and Dave Osborne to match Harris and Bleier, perhaps a stronger bench, and maybe most important of all — that extra smidgeon of experience. They have been to the Super Bowl twice before, Tarkenton has been a regular NFL quarterback for years while Bradshaw had to come off the bench this season to make his mark with the Steelers. Still, if Tarkenton is acknowledged as the best passer, Bradshaw does give the Steelers an edge in running

So there's little to choose from between them except for one little-studied statistic. The Steelers are more turnover prone than the Vikings and one of those indiscretions will cost

Sorry Mama, but the Vikings by four, about 26-22 should

P.S. Bring money.

K Skylines: Logs, Lakes Get Big Lift

By HUMPHRY DAVY Times Staff

Every motorist exploring Vancouver Island can't help but notice how hundreds of beautiful inlets and lakes have been despoiled by log-ging roads knifing around the edge of lake shores.

Logging companies seeking the least expensive route for thier main roads choose the flatter shoreline instead of the steeper slopes surrounding most island lakes, bays and

The main reason for building roads round the rims of lakes is economics (lower road building costs) though other advantages are gained, such as complete control of public-owned lakeshores.

Rocks and earth removed for road building are dumped over the side and small bays and indentations around the lake or lakes disappear.

The slopes surrounding the lakes are soon covered with switch-back roads to permit the movement of heavy equipment to the higher levels where the timber is removed by dragging it to the loading

Foresters say this traditional method of logging often results in serious and lasting damage to the forest environ-ment. The mountainous roads, if not built to first class standards, causes soil erosion and the dragging of timber by a cable, smashes up many good sites are mucked up for ever due to the system of logging.

But now B.C. Forest Service is studying a system of log-ging which it thinks may some of these problems. It is known as skyline logging. It isn't new. It has been adopted by several European countries and is being used in some mountainous areas of the United States but for some reason the system has been shunned by the B.C. log-od of removing timber from the forest by cable suspended between two spars or to points on the terrain. It differs from most other systems in that the timber is lifted clear off the ground, and the forest floor over which the logs are carried is not dis-turbed or damaged.

It also eliminates the con struction of miles of switchback roads.

The project is under the di-rection of forester-engineer Hans Waelti.

He admits that he worked under certain disadvantages.
"We could only get old equipment," he said, "so we had to slow down the movement of logs."

He said the operation used as little as 10 gallons of diese oil a day and the logs arrived at the receiving site clean and

"The advantages were less road building, very little ground disturbance and less breakage," he said.

He agreed the system could be used to avoid building roads right around lakes and TAY NINH, South Vietnam and their furniture to Saigon, (WP) — The usually bustling downtown market section of until the situation becomes this key provincial capital 50 miles northwest of Saigon was like a ghost town Friday.

Longtime residents say the situation has never been so critical. Government forces are digging in for what they think may be major Communist attacks.

Military analysts in Saigon say Tay Ninh may be the next major Communist target after their victory in capturing all of Phuoc Long province early this week. They say the city may be cut off.

They go together.

Flying people on holidays is our business. It's all we do. And we take pride in doing it better than anyone else. We believe, for example, in smiling. And in being on time. And in being a good host. On every Wardair flight you'll enjoy complimentary bar service. You'll enjoy a delicious filet mignon, with French wines and your choice of liqueurs. Perhaps most of all, you'll enjoy being among friends. Especially when all this comes at a price way lower than any regularly scheduled flight. Let us give you that Wardair holiday feeling, non-stop to Britain and Europe.

Earwigs: Prevention Better Than Cure

It will happen again this year just as it has happened every year. Hordes of young earwigs will devour rows of seedlings, and cabbage plants are compared to the control of the condition. The condition is the condition of the co year just as it has happened every year. Hordes of young earwigs will devour rows of seedlings, and cabbage plants wilt as their feeding roots are eaten by maggots. You know it and I know it, but what are we doing in the way of control or prevention?

The Cabbage Root Maggot develops from eggs laid by a fly resembling the common house fly but smaller, as shown at sketch 1 in the draw-

The female fly is careful to The female fly is careful to place the eggs where there is some protection and where food is readily available. Since the maggots feed on the hair roots of brassicas (cabbage, cauliflower, sprouts, broccoli, etc.), the logical place is on the stem of the host plant just, below soil level, as shown in sketch 2.

When the gardener covers

When the gardener covers this vulnerable area, the fly's good intention is thwarted and the plants are protected from damage. All it takes is old-fashioned Cabbage Mats for covering the soil around the plant. The mats are made from old pieces of asphalt shingle, heavy tarpaper, or shingle, heavy tarpaper, or roll roofing.

The Earwig (sketch 5) is a nocturnal feeder, appearing around 11 p.m., banqueting until dawn, then seeking a cosy plee to sleep for the next 17 hours. Earwig traps provide comfortable quarters right among the food plants.

The oldest trap was a clay flower pot inverted on a pointed stake (sketch 6), stuffed with loose newspaper or dry grass. The pots are collected each morning, taken to a blazing refuse burner, and the stuffing plus a few hundred earwigs dropped into the fire.

WORK FOR WEEK

Sterilize some compost soil on drum burner or barbecue outdoors, for seed sowing. Keep slightly damp and under a cover so that it steams and does not bake. Store where it remains moist.

Order seed potatoes now or find out what varieties will be available. Often the one wanted is sold out by planting Check shrubs near foundation under eaves for need of watering. Also planters con-taining bulbs, wallflowers and after storms. Either spread on surface soil (not over plants) or add in chopped layers to winter accumulation of compost on heap.

Don't delay making first plans for vegetable and flower seed purchases. Varieties are so many, yet there are ones more desirable and suitable for your garden that others. You need time to make the choice instead of taking what is displayed just at sowing time is report. In 12 weeks is displayed just at sowing time in sping. Constitutionally, Gaelic is Ireland's first official language, though spoken only by a minority. English technically ranks second. Over the years, the linguistic problem has accurred nationalistic and has acquired nationalistic and political overtones.

The present debate is over whether Gaelic is better pro-moted by compulsory or voluntary means. Used in a crude form before assert that the ruling goes contrary to the policy of giv-ing new life to Gaelic. This move started at the end of the 19th century and played an important part in the nation-alist struggle ending with the proclamation of independence from the United Kingdom in

The Fianna Fail party, long dominated by Eamon de Va-

Some critics say the present government coalition headed by Prime Minister Liam Cos-grave, composed of Fine Gael and the Labor party, is less rigid in its defence of Gaelic than the opposition.

Present government policy is to strengthen Gaelic, recog-nizing its cultural role but considering it unrealistic to seek to replace English as the language of business.

The program takes two forms; economic and social promotion for underdeveloped Gaelic-speaking areas and support of Gaelic cultural ac-tivities.

The six-year military ex-pansion and re-equipment program in Peru, which culminated last year with the de-livery of over 100 Soviet-made T-55 tanks, and growing responses from Chile, Bolivia and Ecuador, had begun to prompt serious worries in other Latin capitals that war might break out across the desert border between Peru and Chile. # JUST JUMP AWAY

TOKYO (UPI) — Children across Asia firmly believe there is a rabbit in the moon.

If so, he'll be smiling come February when the Year of the Rabbit rolls around on the Chinese calendar.

The affable rabbit is the fourth animal in the calendar's 12-year cycle and if his nature casts an influence over 1975, the world is in for peace and an improved economic situation. People born in the year of the rabbit are said to be gentle and happy, trusted by their superiors and colleagues alike.

They also are said to be financially lucky, clever at business and smooth talkers. The Chinese calendar, introduced into Japan in the early years of contact between the two countries, is based on the duodecimal system of cycles of 12 believed to have originated in Babylonia.

Sometime between 480 and 250 B.C., each year in the cycle became associated with a particular animal.

According to legend, Buddha was dying and people and animals hurried to his deathbed. Twelve animals came and the years of the calendar were named after them in order of their arrival.

The crafty rat rode to Buddha's deathbed on the back of the ox and just before arriving there jumped in front of the Ox to become the first animal. After him came the Ox, tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, sheep, monkey, cock, dog and wild Boar. The year of each animal comes around once every

Some experts believed the decision may spell doom for the whole idea, which has been talked about with varying enthusiasm ever since the days of Napoleon.

Until a year ago, plans to burrow under the English Channel looked firm. That was before oil crisis and the march of inflation shook the whole western economy.

fund-raising difficulties for the two tunnel construction companies, the British Chan-nel Tunnel Co. and France's Societe Française du Tunnel Sous la Manche.

According to present estimates, the tunnel building costs may reach $2.3 billion. At least 10 per cent of that would be raised privately by the companies. The rest would come from loans guaranteed by the British and French governments.

The special rail link would have been the first new railroad track to be built in Britain this century. The idea was to carry trains at 150 miles an hour between London and a terminal at Cheriton, near Dover.

Pressure to drop the project will come from the Labor this rail line, first estimated at $276 million, had shot up to a likely $857 million. "It is-out of the question that the government should approve or finance an investment of this

A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1-IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

8—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

a-MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with 4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs iess, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

SPLACE YOURSELF In the PLACE YOURSELF In the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

Don't allow the reader to speculate.

-GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every Inducement you can with good copy, Classified action at readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7-WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

#-TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386 I—TO PLACE YOUR AD. call 388-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courte ous, efficient advisor will be slad to help you word and place your order. And remem ber, Classified Action Ads afford you, the most complete cover-age. Letephones are open 8.37 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily Monday through Saturday cell:

Baron Jean Louis and sister at chateau in 1972

Shot Ends Baron's Siege

MONTAUBAN, France (AP) — Police ended the two-year siege a tLa Fumade Sat-urday, storming the 30-room chateau and seriously wounding a French baron whose family refused to leave the property they formerly cwned. Officials said the baron's sister shouted to him to keep on firing up to the last

One policeman was slightly hurt in the pre-dawn assault. The aristocrat, Baron Jean-Louis de Portal, 22, was taken to Montauban hospital where surgeons removed a bullet from his abdomen and said he remains on the danger list.
Police said he will be charged with armed assault on police De Portal's sister, Marie-Agnes, 23, and his mother, Polish-born Baroness Anna-Marie de Portal, 50, were arrested and taken to the city jail in nearby Toulouse. Both were charged with resisting an eviction order.

The baroness is the widow of Baron Leonce de Portal, a descendant of a minister under France's King Louis XVIII, who died at the age of 89 in March, 1973, in the midst of a complex legal battle to retain control of his oncestral chateau.

permit and kept the baron's body in an upstairs bedroom of the 30-room chateau, sealed in a lead coffin.

The police took no immediate decision on what to do with the coffin, which remained behind in the chateau following the brief gun battle in the pre-dawn darkness. Roger Botellier, public prosecutor in Montauban, told re-porters he ordered the police assault after Jean-Louis on Friday afternoon slightly wounded two farm workers working in the fields near the chateau. Jean-Louis and his sister had vowed since their father's death to shoot to kill anyone who approached the chateau without their permission, and to blow up the building in case of a police attack.

In July, 1972, the chateau was sold by public auction to meet Baron Leonce's tax bills and other debts. The pur-chaser, M. Riviere, paid about $54,000 for the property, cohsidered to be barely one-eighth of the true value of La Fumade's rich farmland.

The family's repeated court appeals against the sale were all rejected, and in April, 1974, a Toulouse court issued a final eviction order. The baroness and her children re-mained barricaded in the austere building, keeping the shutters closed and living in growing solitude.

Riviere harvested the 1974 crops under police protection, but until Saturday morning the police refrained from

Suspensions Over, Teamsters at Work

3 RECRUITED TO KILL BLACKS

OTTAWA (CP) — A defence department spokesman Friday denied any connection be-tween the department and three Manitoba men who say they were recruited to shoot blacks in southern Africa. "We don't have any information . . . the forces are the victims of circumstances," said Col. John Boulay.

The Ottawa Journal said John McKinnon, Fred Miller and Barry Vanderberg, all of Thompson, Man., were promised $1,500 weekly plus $100 for every black they shot.

The newspaper said the three men arrived here Dec.

But about a week later the leader of the group, identified as Steve Dunn, left the three men stranded and did not return. He had promised to meet them at defence headquarters here.

DOCTORS FIND GOUT DRUG WARDS OFF HEART ATTACKS

TORONTO (CP) - Dr. Roy Ellis of Montreal says anturan, a drug used for 20 years to treat gout, has been found effective in warding off strokes and preventing second heart attacks.

Research into the new use of the drug has been conducted in Canada for more than 10 years, he said. The Medical Research Council now is funding a $300,000 trans-Canada study to confirm the research findings.

Dr. Ellis said blood particles, called platewith hardening of the arteries, a condition that can lead to heart attacks or strokes, the platelets can build into clumps on the walls of the blood vessels.

Those clumps may become large enough to block the artery or chunks may break away from the clump and plug tiny blood

Dr. Ellis said observations made in 1965 by Dr. Hugh Smythe and Dr. Metro Ogryzlo of Toronto and Dr. Fraser Mustard of Hamilton showed that gout patients' platelets didn't last as long as those in normal persons.

Treatment with anturan restored the platelets to normal.

Other research has shown that persons suffering with hardening of the arteries had a significantly better chance of survival after being treated with the drug, Dr. Ellis said.

Recently I yas doing a spot of filing some of the informa-tion and I came across a news release taken from a Christian Science Monitor during the rush and bustle of Depaper very close to International Human Rights Day (Dec. 10).

The release came directly from United Nations head-quarters in New York. It said that Queen Elizabeth II Queen Juliana of the Nether lands, President Ford, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, and the heads of state of government of 32 other countries had endorsed (that week) an international declaration of women's rights.

The document was presented to United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim by Princess Ashraf Pahlavi of Iran, sister of the Shah who was one of the signatories.

It noted that progress to-ward equality between the sexes had been extremely slow and that there was still a wide gap between accepted principles and established practices.

The release also publicized the fact that "meantime" the United Nations General Assembly's budgetary committee approved a resolution calling for an equitable balance between men and women working at the UN Secretariat, which at present has only one woman, Helvi Sipila of Finland, in Secretary-General Waldheim's cabinet.

Wilson's Oak Bay store is the place to head for! ... We just happened to be around when these things were being assembled earlier this week ... and we'll mention a few of the dresses which caught our eye ... First, a couple of dinner dresses of 100% cotton voile ... buttoning down the front, with a little mandarin collar and the very new elbow-length sleeves ... Rainbow-hued in yellow to dark brown ... and blue to purple in sizes 8 and 14 respectively ... Another smashing Eva Fisher dinner dress is a softly draping polyester with scoop neck ... big daisies in different colors on a green background ... A long cotton sundress has a white halter top and red and white pique skirt and sleeveless bolero jacket ... There's a really good selection of long dresses, and of course short dresses of all kinds ... sleeveless golf dresses in easy care polyester ... some Lacoste dresses ... several darling dresses made of light-as-air silky cotton ... An apple green in size 12 a yellow in 14 and a blue in 8 ... These have shirtwaist collars, full sleeves and zip down the front ... Some beautiful bargains coming up!

We do think you'd be awfully smart to drop in to Eaton's next Wednesday and do a bit of browsing in the Import Room and Townhouse. because we happen to know there are going to be some mighty nice things with price tags slashed to the bone. (a mixed metaphor if ever we wrote one, but you know what we mean!). The thing is, Eaton's been taking stock in these two departments and are cleaning up. Various odds and ends. "bits and pieces" as Mrs. McPhee describes it. being marked down quite ruthlessly. It's a low-key sort of sale which isn't being bruited about... but you can take our word for it that the bargains are fantastic!. Maybe you've always admired the Import Room's beautiful clothes but felt they were sometimes a mite beyond your pocketbook... Well, here's your opportunity to pick up something really nice to round out your wardrobe without too much of an outlay. We got a glimpse of a few of the sale items on Monday... Some beautiful summer dresses... one in particular a natural pure silk shirtdress whose $200 price tag was in the process of being marked dayn to $75!... How's that for a bargain?. Other things we noticed were Avagolf 100% wool fine knits... Some chic French coats... among them a lovely bone silk coat which would go beautifully with that dress we just told you about. There'll be some evening dresses... a few pairs of slacks... sweaters..., scarves... jewellery and other odds and ends... So go in on Wednesday and have a look at what's being offered in the Import Room and Townhouse, ... You might just find a bonanza!... Eaton's Import Room and Townhouse, ... Cottage Craft kits on sale

Another store that isn't having a formal sale ... but where some juicy plums are there for the picking right now ... is the Handloom ... Seems they're over-stocked on Cottage Craft tweed shirt length and matching varn kits ... one weight in particular ... in Plum and Quoddy Blue ... Hence the kits in these two colors have been reduced from $39.56 to $25 ... if you're handy with the knitting needles and would like a smart matching pure wool sweater and skirt set at a ridiculously low price ... don't pass up the chance of getting one of these exclusive Cottage Craft kits! ... As we said, it's not a store-wide sale, but there are a few other things with worthwhile markdowns . Ptarmigan long hand woven skirts are reduced by 20% ... the $153 skirts going for $108 and the $125 ones ... wraparound style with fringe ... for $106 ... These are really beautiful skirts in lovely colors and textures ... Just a few of them ... Madawaska Weavers' long skirts, a little lighter in weight, are on sale too ... green, fushcia and gold with black design around the skirt and on the belt ... regularly $95 for $80 ... Those tagged at $115 are snipped to $96.75 ... Two large decorator pillows ... one in reds, the other in browns, are reduced from $60 to $50 ... and that gorgeous stained glass window panel you'll see in one of the View St. windows can be yours for $480 instead of its regular $600 price!

There may be some "damaged" pottery of various kinds grouped together ... and when we say damaged, this doesn't mean broken but just imperfect in some way you'd probably never notice ... like the lovely Wayne Ngnan raku tea bowl with a "kilin chip" we couldn't even see ... reduced from $50 to $40 ... Victoria's Mecca for needlecraft aficionadas:

For people addicted to any art form there's always a Mecca, and for those whose "thing" is needlecraft of any kind. Christie's is definitely the Mecca here in Victoria. They carry simply everything needed for needlepoint, crewel work, embroidery, crocheting, knitting and creative stitchery. Full lines of Paton's and DMC tapestry wools: DMC and Anchor embroidery cottons. Penelope crewel varns from England. New canvases are coming in all the time, as well as other exciting things for needlecrafters. Latest arrivals are standing frames for needlepoint. These, we understand, are very hard to get. and very much to be desired because. I hey make working so much easier. We dropped by at Christie's on Monday and saw one of these standing frames. Saw some other interesting things too. like the attractive sewing boxes with padded tops. In various sizes to keep all your sewing needs in ... There's a good supply of Lobi varn from Iceland. Emu Mohair in a good choice of colors. This makes up into lovely sweaters and stoles!. Something we hand't seen before is the Aida and Hardanger cloth which is sold by the yard... or less if need be. We're not too sure just how this is used. but those of you who know about needlecraft will recognize the names immediately. No one need ever know

We're not going to be fatuous and pretend that undergoing radical surgery ... especially mastectomy ... is any bed of roses ... But we do want to say that no woman who finds herself in this unfortunate position need feel that it's the end of the world ... that she's lost her figure irretrievably. Certainly not nowadays when you can get such natural breast forms as Tru-Life by Camp ... the most advanced prosthesis of it's kind ... sold by McGill & Orme's Surgical Supplies Ltd ... Unbelievably natural. Tru-Life's composed of a liquid centre embedded in softest plastic ... encased in a dainty nylon cover, Looks and feels like living flesh ... moves with the body ... and so light-weight we're assured the wearer never feels it ... Once this is carefully fitted, it's worn with one's favorite bra ... or better still, one of Camp's special bras ... a new one of which has just come on the market ... It's a front-fastening bandeau type bra with nylon lace front. Iycra spandex back and soft nylon pockets into which the Tru-Life form fits ... So pretty and comfortable that we suspect women who haven't had mastectomies will be buying it! ... Anyway, getting back to what we were saying above, once her Tru-Life is fitted, a woman can wear a swimsuit, sleeveless dresses or evening gowns ... go about all her usual chores and enjoy the pleasures she always did ... without anyone being ithe wiser! ... We honestly hope few of our readers are in need of such a prosthesis ... but for those who are, let Surgical Supplies Itt you with a Tru-Life ... a truly wonderful morale builder! ... "Relative" Flights from the U.K.

"Relative" Flights from the U.K.

While you were sitting around the festive board on Christmas day perhaps drinking a loast to members of the family who were not present a custom we always observe in OUR family ... did you maybe feel how wonderful it would be to see old parents or other kinfolk living in the United Kindom? ... Well, why not bring hem out to visit you this year? It can cost you so little and yet mean so much ... to them and to you! ... A holiday of a lifetime ... to be remembered for a lifetime! ... The reason for all this nostalgia on our part is that Paulin's told us this week about the "Relative Flights" from the U.K. to Canada on Wardair ... which have now been approved by the Government and for which Paulin's are accepting reservations ... These are charter flights, from either London or Manchester to Vancouver ... and are available from roughly the end of April until the latter part of September, for varying lengths of stays in this country ... Farres range from $332 to $421, depending on the time of year isummer's more expensive than spring or fall ... You pay for the ticket here, so all the U.K. recipient has to do is board the jet for the happy reunion in Vancouver or Victoria ... Just about the nicest gift you could give anyone dear to you!' ... For people at this end who di like to travel to the U.K. by charter, Paulin's have all the departure dates, prices etc. but at the moment are only accepting registrations, not reservations ... because these flights have not as 'yet received government approval ... but if you're at all interested go in and ask Paulin's for pertinent information ... There can be no reasonable objections to a factual listing of all the doctors in a community, with a full accounting of their training and their capa-cities. Such listings could have wide circulation and be pitals, or medical society offices.

But medicine has enough troubles without demeaning its practitioners with cheap jack publicity and double talking hucksters.

The term "biblical criticism" can be a misleading one. The word "criticism" popularly suggests fault-finding or some kind of condemnation. But biblical criticism is not a matter of adverse judgment of the Bible: it is, ment of the Bible: it is, rather, a matter of rigorous examination and positive appreciation. ### CUP OF COFFEE AND SOME TALK

Mary's Patio Grill, 607 Johnson, will be open Monday morning from 6 till 7 as Christians reach out to economically and spiritually starved people in Victoria.

Free coffee and toast is provided at discussion sessionswhere no lectures are given and people gather informally to talk about God.

talk about God.

Victoria resident John Tisdalle, active in several Christian groups, began the outreach hour this way:

"As I was coming downtown (one morning) I saw people the worse for wear, and they needed a cup of coffee. I knew it would be a good chance to talk to them."

Acquainted with the owner of the grill, Tisdalle asked for "just one hour a week."

Last Monday he took a walk around the block before entering the restaurant, looking for those who sleep in doorways.

None were found. It had been cold that night.

Lzter in the grill several laborers on their way to a job sat down at the counter, and Christians sauntered over to strike up talk.

Strike up talk.

They wanted to spread the world of God.

"You don't have to be aggressive, but just talk conversationally. No way do we want to argue and say our way is the only way," said Tisdalle.

OUR OBJECTIVE: FAIR PLAY

In 1974, for the first time, seven local governments of the City of Victoria, Municipality of Saanich, Municipality of Oak Bay,

The purpose of this collective approach is fair play: fair to the taxpayer and fair to the employee.

In considering the taxpayer, the Regional Bargaining Group is aware that it has offered pay increases of more than $3,000,000 on payrolls which totalled more than $16,000,000 in 1974. We know that the economy is in decline, that many in this area are on fixed incomes, and that the local-taxpayer's pocket is not bottomless.

The employee's position has to be assessed sfraightforwardly. It must be recognized that inflation has eroded buying power since the last contracts were signed. The provincial government has granted large raises to its workers, which forces local governments to reconsider their pay scales.

Some plain words must be said. Massive pay raises only speed inflation and are ultimately self-defeating. An economic recession is no time to seek major gains. In the past five years, salaries and benefits paid by our local governments have risen by more than 60 per cent while the Canadian Consumer Price Index rose by 34 per cent. Current municipal salaries and benefits are well in advance of what is paid by many for comparable work.

With all this in mind, members of the Regional Bargaining Group have offered virtually every employee a 1975 raise of at least 15.76 per cent. In many job categories — especially the lower-paid the offer is better. In some instances it is 34 per cent. As well, the offer on annual vacations has been improved considerably.

A major objective of the Regional Bargaining Group, over a period of time, is to standardize pay and benefits for similar work in our jurisdictions. We hope to eliminate the resentments which unrelated pay scales generate.

The Regional Bargaining Group offers its employees fair and just pay and benefits. Just treatment must be accorded the taxpayer also. We foresee the consequences to the community if the municipal tax burden becomes intolerable.

We're all in this together.

The new revenue-sharing proposal outlined by Barrett was presented by the B.C. government as an alternative to a contentious provision in the new federal budget.

The B.C. premier said the scheme he has proposed would give Ottawa an additional $60 million a year from gas sales, or three or four times more than would flow into the federal treasury under the budget proposal.

In effect, Barrett urged Ottawa to enter into an ad hoc agreement bypassing the con-troversial "fair market value" provision of the bud-get. He did not call directly

CIA 'Welcome to Whole Ruddy Lot' in U.K. Transport

By IAN MACDONALD Times London Bureau

LONDON - Peales of hysterical laughter rang through the swaying carriages of London's subway trains as commuters read of a plan by the mighty CIA to steal the secrets of the city's' underground transport system. "Blimey, mate, they're welcome to cart the whole ruddy lot off to America," said one bowler-hatted stockbroker's clerk, wiping his eyes clear of tears of merriment.

The CIA conspiracy turned out to be one of those rare issues that causes London tube travellers to talk to each other instead of » gazing at advertisements for jobs as bank clerks.

"The only secret we've got is how to make passengers grow beards as they wait for trains," said one rather disloyal train guard.

"Rubbish," said a typist with acne. The problem with the B.C. proposal, from the federal viewpoint, is that the "fair market value" clause is considered a "companion piece" to the equally contentious nondeductibility provision that applies to Alberta oil.

As the finance official said when asked about the possibility of federal concurrence in the Barrett scheme, "What would Alberta think?"

Barrett said the proposed immediate increase of 35 per cent would make the Canadian export price of B.C. natural gas comparable to the price charged by Americans for the sale of their own natugas within the United

'We are selling our gas at we are seining our gas at less than what the Americans charge to sell gas to them-selves," he said, adding B.C. consumers would not be af-fected by the proposed increase as it applies only to export prices.

Kay Grouhel, president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, said the UBCM would back Barrett "all the way" in his bid to raise the gas price.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said today the revenue-sharing plan indicates a recognition by the provincial government that revenue-sharing is preceded. That they are really needed, "but they are really dragging us into political ploy without a comprehensive rec-ognition of the more serious problem which is the lack of disciplined and sophisticated budgeting."

While any infusion of funds into the municipality is wel-come, Pollen said, "I can't get really excited about the idea of revenue-sharing" when there are still many other areas, such as the gasoline and licence tax, that are not shared by the provincial and municipal governments, he said.

Grieve said any extra money given his municipality would "help out" but felt it could be put to better use providing housing in the more urbanized areas.

Grieve said what North Saanich needs more than anything is a change in legislation to allow the municipality to tax residential land within the area on a higher mill rate than farm and rural land.

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum said revenue-sharing between senior and local governments "is one of the areas I have been driving at for a long time.'

He said the property owners in Saanich were the only source of tax revenue, "and it's just not enough.'

End.
So the connection is there, you see. And I was somewhat saddened by the news earlier this week that a theatre company is to fold.
"Victoria's Company One theatre troupe is being disbanded after tight school board budgets all over the province drastically curtailed company bookings for the coming season," the story said. The fact that this piocompany bookings for the coming season," the story said. The fact that this pioneer concept of taking improvisational theatre to all kinds of institutions had to die, has saddened quite a few people.

Like Carl Hare.

And Michael Meiklejohn.

And Joe Sala, to name a few.

Company One was Carl Hare's baby. He conceived the idea, after a year's tour of Europe studying mime and all theatre, and had been artistic director since its birth three-and-a-half years ago.

A full professor in the theatre department at the University of Victoria, Carl is married (his wife is listed as Company One's research as-sistant) and has three children. But he looks younger than his 42 years and has that teen-like kind of vitality and enthusiasm when you get him talking of his three loves: "acting, directing and teach-

There is, says Carl graciously, "no villain in this piece." The problem is that, with inflation, the school boards are "caught in a real

But, despite the fact, as Hare points out, "we are not out to make a killing, just to make enough to keep going" and the fact that the actors were on barely-livable wages, with today's economy and the demands on school board budgets, that's a lot of money.

Janitors Workload Tiff Ending

Victoria Times

SATURDAY, JANUARY 11, 1975 15

SECOND SECTION

Victoria school board have reached tentative agreement on future workloads

If ratified by the membership on both sides the agreement will be inserted in the janitors' contract now being negotiated.

It was mediated by two Labor Relations Board repre-sentatives in a meeting at the Empress Friday.

Negotiating for janitors and eustodians was their Canadian Union of Public Employees

The agreement ended two years of uncertainty over for-mulas for hours the janitors should work. In the fall of 1974, rental of schools by community groups were cancelled on several occasions because of the ongoing dispute.

Now expected to sweep 3,000 square feet of floor per hour, janitors were requesting that figure be cut to 2.500.

"The school board felt the requests we were making as to square footage would cost a great deal of money, so we man-hours worked) would be made in any schools, we would be happy to keep the status quo," said union local first vice-president Bob Cunningham today.

"We're quite happy with it (the agreement)," he said. With no deletion of manhours, it gives them partial-job security."

Board representatives had been talking about cutting down man-hours for the jani-torial staff, he said.

The agreement will go the union membership for a vote Sunday, and the negotiating committee has recommended acceptance.

Ask The Times

Q: Is there a noise-regulating law in B.C. that applies especially to Sundays? W.S.

A: Regulation of noise is not under provinical jurisdiction. Individual municipalities prohibit excessive noise especially on Sundays with their anti-noise bylaws. The federal Lord's Day Act, too, deals indirectly with the subject by prohibiting certain activities on Sunday which are noisy.

That's Not Junk Mail—It's Bureaucratic Tangle

Audrey McCaghey stacks piles of letters

Some time within the next couple of days, everyone who inhabits a chunk of real estate mansion or place of business will receive through the mail a letter from their friendly neighborhood bureaucrat at

It's not exactly a chatty note, though. In fact, it's a heavy slab of officialese, re-plete with phrases, like "Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in any other section of this part" and other ultimate deterrents.

The notice isn't even relevant to most of the 28,878 peohearing almost entirely concerned with routine, regulatory changes in the city's zoncity officials is largely a waste of time, effort and money.

How costly? At a conservative estimate, the total bill for $1,500. And that, in the words go the way of all junk mail.

But the city has no alterna-tive, because a 1973 amend-ment to the Municipal Act and a recent B.C. Supreme Court ruling says that's the way it has to be in the interests of democracy.

Let's consider the amendment first.

For many years previously, the only notification require-ment was for newspaper acpublic hearing. If some unfortunate homeowner missed the particular ad, remained ing, and eventually found a massive highrise going up next door — well, my friend, that was just too bad.

But all that changed But all that changed in April, 1973, when the NDP government brought in an amendment requiring all "owners and occupiers" of real estate potentially affect-ed by any rezoning or land-use contract to be notified in

The revised legislation left it open to municipalities to define in their own bylaws the toria duly stipulated that this whould be within a 200-foot radius of the area proposed municipalities, but how do we keep track of a constantly shifting to nearly shifting tenant population?

And just think of all that paperwork! While rezoning a single piece of property might not be too difficult to publicize in accordance with the act, it was something else again to figure out all those 200-foot program like the James Bay

But there was a still-bigger headache for municipal plan-ning officials and legal advisors: the fear that a key rezoning might be quashed by the courts if even one entitled citizen could show that he had not been notified in advance. To simplify matterss, the Union of B.C. Municipalities suggested the reference in the act to "occupiers" be deleted,

The government's response wasn't quite what was expected. In the fall legislative session of 1973, there was a one-word deletion all right — but of "owners," not "occupiers. Thus arose the situation where property owners were - and still are - entirely ignored under certain circum-

ing property in Saanich, which he rents out, doesn't have to be automatically in-formed if that municipality proposes to rezone adjoining land to industrial use. In that case the notification goes only to the "occupier" concerned (his tenants) and if they don't forward the letter to him he doesn't have a clue The only relief offered by the government last year, in the way of amendments, were the provisions that notifica-tions could be delivered rather than mailed; and that no bylaw'could be quashed if some occupiers had not been contacted, provided the mu-nicipality could show to the court's satisfaction that it had made "all reasonable efforts" to mail or deliver notices.

But other problems surfaced for municipalities in 1974, following a B.C. Supreme Court test case on a Victoria zoning bylaw amendessence, the dispute centred on the precise defini-tion of the word "rezoning" in the Municipal Act. The plain-tiffs in the case, operators of been notified helps to explain Victoria's current obsession with play-ing it safe — even if that means a complete mail-drop operation for which the Post Office bill alone is $866. Add to that about 60 reams of running a multilith printing machine for three days at the staff time of one full-time operator with some casual help, and the bill for inform-ing all of the people all of the time soon mounts up.

On this occasion it could be argued that there is at least partial justification for the expense, as one of the seven proposed bylaws mentioned will rezone hundreds of properties in the downtown area But what about other times and other less significant

Couldn't the officials in the department of the municipal affairs minister devise a simpler yet effective system of notification?

One source said they are aware of the shortcomings, and they're trying to come up
